

101207	Lexicographic Applications	(3 credit hours)	(prerequisite -)
---------------	-----------------------------------	-------------------------	--------------------------

The course aims to introduce students to the ancient and contemporary language dictionaries and the principles of their use as a primary tributary stream of lexical semantic knowledge. It is also concerned with tracing the lexical denotation variations in different linguistic contexts and the impact of the text's field of knowledge in regenerating lexical denotations and determining their pragmatic prospects through varied linguistic and stylistic structures and texts of enduring fields of knowledge such as literature, politics, media, religion, and social sciences.