

101434	Syntactic and Morphological Applications	(3 credit hours)	(prerequisite -)
---------------	---	-------------------------	--------------------------

This course serves to acquaint Arabic students with a number of its theoretical and applied issues. It includes units on syntactic and morphological issues such as: the verbal and nominal sentences and their aspects, appendants, and related word morphology. These issues are consequently applied to texts from the Quran, Prophetic Hadiths, and Arabic poetry and prose, with the aim of ingraining these issues in the mind of the student through application.
